All India Disaster Mitigation Institute (AIDMI), Gujarat, is a community based action research, action planning and action advocacy organisation now spreading it's work beyond India. It works towards bridging the gap between policy, practice and research related to disaster risk mitigation, in an effort to link the local community and policy level activities across the system.

AIDMI's innovative approach for disaster risk reduction includes: capturing and spreading new ideas, building local capacity of communities, research and knowledge sharing, policy round tables, and pilot projects that step by step manage the system.

AIDMI was established in response to the repeated 1987–89 droughts in India. It has evolved from a project in 1989 to an autonomous organisation in 1995. During its evolutionary journey, AIDMI has developed four security programmes. These are: (a) Food Security, (b) Water Security, (c) Livelihood Security and (d) Habitat Security. The four jointly contribute to building Human Security. Disaster victims also have Human Rights to achieve this Human Security.

Regarding work process, AIDMI considers four phases of disaster management when implementing its Human Security approach: Relief Phase, Rehabilitation Phase, Recovery Phase and Risk Reduction. All these four phases must be taken into account with both action and learning to help communities effectively reduce disaster risk. AIDMI sets agendas, shapes knowledge, and pilots projects in favour of the poor and excluded among disaster victims and the vulnerable.
